“ The first time I visited Helen Parker at her mom and Dad's house one summer afternoon, and Connie and Kathy were there also, their dad came home from work and walked over to his pipe rack that had several pipes in it, and he grabbed his favorite pipe and felt warm, because the girls were smoking his pipe earlier, and Les ask who was smoking his favorite pipe, Connie spoke up and said Gary was smoking it. Les Parker without looking at me said, tell Gary to keep his damn hands off my stuff. I was shaking in my shoes looking for a way to escape. But over the next few years I became his son in law after that and became the son he never had. I was mad at Connie for that day but remained friends for the next 48 years. Go rest high on your mountain girl, your race is run.
