“ *To Ethan's Mother,
I am so sorry for the loss of your child. I have walked in your shoes almost 10 years ago. My heart breaks for you and your family. I wish I had something to share with you that would ease your pain but I do not. The only thing I would share with you is this. Everyone will grieve differently in your family and no one will grieve like you do.
You are his mother and you gave him life, you watched him grow, you protected him, and your love is the most precious love on this earth. My son showed me a few of Ethan's post and he loved you so much! Please understand there is no right or wrong things to do right now. You do whatever you need to heal and help your other children heal the best you can. Please try to remember how blessed you are for having such a wonderful son and for all your other children. I will pray for you and your family. My Jamie may live in Heaven now but she is forever with me. My loves still grows stronger every day for her and my other three children. I know my Jamie was standing by Heaven's gates to greet your Ethan with open arms and love.
With the deepest of sadness and heartbreak!

“ When I first think of Ethan, I remember before I ever really knew him that I was always being told he thought I was hot, and I thought it was so weird because we would be considered family someday, and I was right. He always had the funniest responses because he was so good at being a kind smartass to everyone. The conversations between Christina and Ethan were hilarious, as they are with any of her children, due to the twisted sense of humor you all seem to carry. (Which is not a bad thing) I've always respected the independence each of you have, but I have respected how close you are as a family, even more. Ethan was always a GREAT, big brother! I don't think he enjoyed being anything more. He seemed a lot like the rock of the family. He would do anything for anyone. I remember he was always quick to help, no matter what you asked. He was a very responsible, young man. My favorite thing about him was that he never tried to follow the crowd, especially within his own age group. He was against a lot of the stupid things kids like to experience around his age which gave him more time to be smarter than the people his age, he knew a lot and was very mature. He has certainly gone too soon! But I know he will be looking after everyone and protecting them as much as he can and always has. He will surely be missed, more than words can say. May he rest in peace, after he finds his way. You will forever be in my thoughts and prayers! </3

“ I had Ethan in class at Valley View last year. I saw him really mature as the year progressed. He was a funny guy with an unmistakeable voice. “ Just last weekend I went down to Sam's shop and mounted some tires and Ethan helped me, it had been awhile since I had seen or spoke to Ethan and I was blown away by how grown up he was..... We had multiple good conversations and I left the shop impressed with him. Great kid with a huge heart.

“ I was one of Ethan's teachers at Valley View. He had a wicked sense of humor, so witty, and always made me laugh. Ethan was such a smart guy, even though school was not his thing, and we had some deep conversations. Ethan was always kind and respectful to me. I feel he would have "had my back" if I ever needed him. I believe he is at peace now and hope and pray that his family and close friends can find some comfort as they miss Ethan.
