“ I'll never forget when I sold her home on Moore st. At the closing all the legal documents had been signed by the the buyer of her home when she told the buyers she needed to make them aware that ghost lived in the attic and they would probably hear them from time to time but they were good ghost and they were no trouble and they would get used to the noises they made. It just so happened that the buyer was a black lady and her eyes got as big as silver dollars . Some how we made it through . She was quite a lady. Butch Fordyce.
